

When his father is arrested for corruption, a young man must help his family escape from their oppressive government. On the run from the secret police, he will need to rely on a loyal team of friends and colleagues while trying to avoid being caught. The whole family will soon realize that remaining under-the-radar has its own consequences and that the world beyond is not as they were told. As their journey starts out with hope, it quickly turns into a desperate search for a safe place to call home in this surrealist adventure with supernatural themes reminiscent of House of Leaves by Mark Z. Danielewski and Charlie Kaufman's Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind. Mubarakan is the feature debut of writer-director Akshat Verma, who has previously made award-winning web series including "Save Your Legs!" and "The Amazing Gaylord". The film stars Ashish Verma (son of Akshat), Mouni Roy, Shashank Arora and Rahul Dev. The film was produced by the writer director Akshat Verma and Mahendra Soni under their banner 7th Sense Productions. Additional funding came from the National Film Development Corporation. The music of Mubarakan is composed by Arko Pravo Mukherjee, Daler Mehndi, Kailash Kher & Prateek Kuhad. The film had its world premiere at the Tribeca Film Festival on April 13, 2013. The film was released in India on May 2, 2015.

The soundtrack album is given by Kailash Kher and Prateek Kuhad and it consists mainly of Bollywood remixes of popular Hindi songs. Pranay Chaudhuri from Yahoo India gave the film 3/5 stars and wrote that "Akshat Verma's debut feature Mubarakan makes for a compelling watch thanks to smart direction and performances by its entire cast". He also commented on the film's use of mixed media, stating "the idea of a film being shot in real time with no cuts, loops or cuts in terms of cuts is a really interesting one and it is something that will definitely force the audience to watch the entire film in a single sitting just to see how it plays out". Anupama Chopra from NDTV called the film "an ambitious debut that succeeds most parts of it but just misses the mark at some other places". She explained that "There are enough scares to keep you on your toes, but not enough logic for you to be sure about what's real and what's not, which makes it difficult for viewers to give this one hundred per cent. It's a fine line, but for a film to be called truly original it has to do better than this." She also said that "The performances are terrific". "Mubarakan" opened to poor response at the box office. In its first week, the movie collected 3.50 crore. The movie earned 10 crore in its lifetime and was declared as an 'Flop' by Box Office India which is considered as one of the worst opening for a Bollywood movie in 2015. However it has turned out to be an average grossing movie considering the fact that it is made on a low budget and having big stars starring in it such as Mouni Roy and Ashish Verma.
